In May of 2013 Todd and I climbed to the top of Half Dome in Yosemite NP. We trained for months to develop the stamina for the 16 mile roundtrip trek with an elevation gain of 4000 feet.

The day before I thought it would be a good idea to go up to Glacier point at 6000 feet so I could start to acclimate to the higher elevation. Instead of helping it to instead made me nauseous and I spent the night before in the camp bathroom.

When the alarm went off at 4am I had only been asleep for 2 hours. It's important to get an early start so you can head back down before the afternoon thunderstorms strike. There is no shelter at the top from lightning strikes. This was the only day we could do the hike. I had to wait a whole year to get a new permit. So now or never. I crawled out of the sleeping bag and weakly started the hike. Trying not to throw up and having to stop every 20 minutes to run off into whatever bush I could find to basically not poop my pants. I was cold and weak and felt faint and miserable for hours and hours of relentless uphill marching. Finally after 5 hours we reached Nevada Falls. Behind schedule. But the period of time and stares at me before curling up next to my leg.

LIBERTY CAP TOP OF SUN CAME AT AND WILD FLOWERS WERE EVERYWHERE AND I COULD NOT WAIT MY PAPER BOAT AND YACHT WITHOUT BOYFRIEND. THINGS WERE GOOD.
